Report: NSS Induction Program for First-Year B.Pharm Students at Laureate Institute of Pharmacy

Date: August 4, 2023

Venue: Old Seminar Hall, Laureate Institute of Pharmacy

On August 4, 2023, an induction program for the new admission students of the first year was conducted at the Laureate Institute of Pharmacy, during which the National Service Scheme (NSS) was introduced to the students. The program was held in the Old Seminar Hall and was organized by Dr. Shammy Jindal, the NSS Officer of the institute.

The event commenced with an opening address by Dr. Shammy Jindal, who emphasized the significance of NSS in promoting social responsibility, community service, and personal development among the students. Dr. Jindal provided an overview of the NSS, its vision, mission, and the essential roles it plays in fostering a sense of social consciousness and active citizenship among the youth. He highlighted the NSS's commitment to addressing social issues, such as health, education, environment, and rural development.

During the session, Dr. Jindal briefed the students about the various activities conducted by the NSS in both rural and urban areas. These activities include blood donation drives, cleanliness campaigns, health and hygiene awareness programs, educational initiatives for underprivileged children, tree plantation, and various community development projects. He emphasized how active participation in NSS activities could not only bring positive change to society but also help students develop leadership, communication, and teamwork skills.

Following Dr. Shammy Jindal's presentation, Prof. (Dr.) MS Ashawat, the Director cum Principal of Laureate Institute of Pharmacy, encouraged the students to enroll in the NSS unit. He stressed the importance of community engagement and service as an integral part of the holistic education that the institute aims to provide. Prof. Ashawat highlighted that NSS participation would complement their academic learning, nurture empathy, and create a deeper understanding of societal challenges.

The induction program was met with enthusiasm from the first-year students, and many of them showed interest in joining the NSS. The program concluded with a Q&A session, where students had the opportunity to seek clarifications and express their eagerness to actively participate in NSS initiatives.

In conclusion, the NSS induction program at Laureate Institute of Pharmacy successfully introduced the first-year admission students to the NSS and its noble objectives. The event provided valuable insights into the potential benefits of NSS participation and inspired the students to contribute meaningfully to the community while fostering personal growth.

The institute looks forward to welcoming the new NSS volunteers and hopes to witness their enthusiasm and dedication in making a positive impact on society through various NSS activities.
